

CRIPPLED BOYS TO ENJOY PROGRAM ON SATURDAY, MAY 7

Kiddies To Be Called For And Taken in Autos to Morning Exercises

PARADE IN AFTERNOON

After Lunch the Boys Will Ride in The Big Parade

Crippled boys of Bristol are to participate as usual in festivities of Boys' Week and they are to be amply provided for, according to plans of the General Committee which met last night. Dr. J. Fred Wagner is chairman of the Committee and he desires to get the name and address of every physically incapacitated child in the Borough. Automobiles will call for the crippled children on the morning of Saturday, May 7th, and take them to the Colonial Theater where the morning exercises are to be held. The children will then be returned to their homes for lunch and called for again in the afternoon and taken over the route of the parade and to the high school grounds where the various contests are to be staged.

At the Committee meeting held last night it was positively decided that all boys who are to participate in either the track or field events are to parade. Last year some of the boys who wanted to compete in the relay races did not parade and this disqualified them from the events and lost the honors for their ward.

Frank Pfeiffer again calls for all harmonica players to be at his store Monday night at seven o'clock. It is very important that all harmonica players be present.

Harrison C. Leake, sixth ward leader, wants all boys of that ward to report to him, 317 Monroe street, not later than April 27th. Final try-outs for all field events will take place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock at the high school field.

All eligibility coupons must be turned in not later than April 27th.

MOFFO WINS

Last night in Lakewood, N. J., Sammy Moffo, of Bristol, defeated Patsy Nelson, of Newark, in the wind-up. The Bristol boy proved to be too fast for Nelson, who put up a fine fight. In the semi-final Billy Moffo fought a draw with Billy Wallace of New York.

Mrs. William Fitzgerald, of Cornwells Heights, is receiving treatment at the Harriman Hospital for pleurisy.

Mrs. Harry Simpson, Sr., of Sharon Hill, Pa., spent several days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Christopher Buchler, Jr., of Jefferson avenue.

Bristol tomorrow morning goes on Daylight Saving Time and beginning at 2 a. m., all clocks (except official ones) will be moved ahead one hour.

Public schools will open Monday according to Daylight Saving Time.

P. R. R. trains, ferries, trolleys will adjust their schedules to conform to the new time and churches, tomorrow, will be on the new schedule.

The dates April 24th to 30th have been designated as FIRE PREVENTION WEEK throughout Bristol. And, as the citizens of Bristol are so familiar with the destructiveness of fire, I think that we should take notice of the occasion.

The year 1926 recorded the greatest Fire Waste ever known in the United States. More than fifteen thousand persons were killed and a vastly larger number crippled by fire, with a property loss of $508,000,000 in 1923. It is well known that carelessness and ignorance of fire hazards go hand in hand as the chief causes of our great National Bonfire.

You will be interested to know, of course, the causes of most of the fires we have. Three-fourths of them come from carelessness, and these are some of the things that cause them:

Defective Chimneys and Flues, Spontaneous Combustion, Rubbish, Hot Ashes and Coals, Over-heated Stoves, Matches and Smoking, Sparks on Roof, Gasoline; Burning autumn leaves and dead grass is also dangerous.

Always call the Fire Department before burning off vacant lots!

Please observe these "Don't's":

"Don't smoke in a garage or filling station."

"Don't be careless with your cigar and cigarette stubs."

"Don't leave current on electric irons."

"Don't store oily rags or waste used in polishing furniture—BURN THEM."

Fire waste is not paid by Insurance Companies; they only distribute the money that is paid by the people when they buy merchandise. The cost of Fire Tax is concealed in the price of the goods.

If we all use PRECAUTION and TEACH OUR BOYS AND GIRLS THE HAZARDS OF FIRE, it won't be long until the FIRES WILL BE REDUCED TO A MINIMUM.

Respectfully submitted,

C. L. ANDERSON,

Burgess.

WOMEN'S DRESS PLAYED BY DOYLESTOWN SPEAKER

Mrs. Findley Braden Tells W. C. T. U. Audience of The Need for Dress Reform

UNHEALTHFUL STYLES

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 23.—Short skirts and women's dress in general was played here yesterday by Mrs. Findley Braden, a local poet as she addressed the monthly meeting of the Doylestown W. C. T. U. The program subject was "What Can the Bucks County W. C. T. U. Do Toward Bringing About Reform in Dress?"

Mrs. Braden criticized short skirts as an indication of the letting down of moral standards.

"When the average young man of today marries, what does he get? A bobbed, half-empty cranium, topped by a bridal veil that often sweeps the floor, a neck and arms too much exposed, and two silk-clad legs."

"The time has come," Mrs. Braden declared, "when we should voice our disapproval of the present day fashions. More than half of our good Bucks county women and girls have long been trying to ape the average New York City flapper in their personal appearance."

"Skirts and sleeves are too short, and bare necks challenge the coldest weather. The sanitariums are filled with tubercular victims in consequence."

"Ill manners and foolish speech go with scanty attire."

"Away back in the centuries Roman women represented all that was good and noble. The decadence of Rome began with the letting down of the moral bars by its own women. They gradually degraded themselves and men lost the respect they had always held for them. They drank to excess and lived only for pleasure, and their children, the future men and women of Rome, were wholly neglected."

"Has the decadence of America already begun through the apparel and actions of its women?"

"Reform in dress is only one of the great needs of today."

The Doylestown branch yesterday advocated the organization of a public kindergarten for this borough and suggested that the parents of the town interested in the proposition, petition the board of education.

HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR WINS ORATORICAL HONORS IN CONTEST

Robert Lehman To Represent Philadelphia Suburban Area On May 13th

WINS THE SEMI-FINALS

Last Year He Won Second Honors In The Contest

Defeating six opponents in the semi-finals of the National Oratorical Contest, held in Norristown last evening, Robert F. Lehman, of Radcliffe street, Bristol, was chosen to represent the Philadelphia Suburban Area at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the 13th of May.

Young Lehman, who is a senior at the Bristol High School, had as his subject "America's Contribution to Constitutional Government," and gave his oration in a most commendable manner. This was the second time he has delivered the message, and by winning last evening is eligible to compete with representatives of other areas in Philadelphia next month.

His opponents last evening were: Rebecca Price, of Norristown High School, second, whose subject was "John Marshall and the Constitution"; Florence Massey, of the Abington High School, third; Joseph Thomas, Jr., of the Radnor High School, a former resident of Bristol; Elmer E. Simmons, of Bryn Athyn High School; Milton Jacobson, Conshohocken High School; Robert Kessler, Lower Merion High School.

The judges of the contest were: Theodore Lane Bean, a Norristown attorney; the Rev. Samuel Moyer, Parkside; Eugene B. Alessandrini, assistant district attorney of Philadelphia County; Prof. M. W. Witmer, of Ursinus College; A. E. Weston, head of the English department of Cheltenham High School. Judge William F. Solly, of the Montgomery County Court, presided.

Ten minutes is the time limit allowed for the presentation of each oration. Giving his theme in an easy manner, with well-timed gestures, the Bristol lad consumed eight minutes and 55 seconds.

Last year in the semi-final contest, Lehman obtained second place. He is the second individual chosen to represent any area thus far this year. The first one chosen was James Tunnell, of Delaware, who will be one of Lehman's opponents at the Academy of Music in three weeks.

SATURDAY, APRIL 23, 1927

TOBACCO

It is not enough to brush aside with a mild pooh! pooh the recently heralded campaign for the abolition of tobacco. To dismiss its promoters as amiable busy-bodies, powerless to do harm and perhaps useful in adding momentary gaiety to a jazz-tired age, would be a grave mistake. It is the experience of history that the American people are so easy-going—either so morally lazy or so good-natured, according to your choice of definition—that a persistent minority can write almost anything it wants into the laws of the land.

On this very subject of tobacco we have the humiliating example of several states in which it is a penal offense to roll or light a cigarette. Of course, the law is not enforced in any of them; but there it lies on the statute books, a mockery, serving only to tickle the vanity of a handful of kindly old souls who nagged the legislature into passing it.

But that is not the sum of its evil. For every law that is defied or ignored is an object lesson in lawlessness, educating the public in contempt of all law, spawning criminals and making it difficult or impossible to enforce those laws on which the order, stability and welfare of the community depend.

That tobacco, used in moderation, has added much to the sum of human happiness cannot be gainsaid. Whatever ills may have been the outgrowth of the habit are due to over indulgence. But no one proposes to pass laws to regulate eating, because it is an unquestioned fact that men and women, some of them blatantly righteous, overeat to the extent of keeping themselves constantly in the hands of physicians.

It is not our purpose here, however, to defend tobacco. It is quite able to take care of itself. But we do want to utter a warning against the American habit of supineness in the face of crank agitation.

What the nation needs more than anything else is a legislative housecleaning. If three-fourths of the laws could be formally and legally repealed and measures taken to insist on strict accountability to those permitted to remain, the nation would have made a long step in the science of self-government and have contributed to the moral growth of its citizenship.

Perhaps Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, had some such reflection when he emphatically refused to permit his name to be linked with the new crusade on tobacco.

In Africa, the native girls want American clothes. Somebody is going to get sunburned.

Necessity may be the mother of invention; but this doesn't explain patent leather hair.

In the old days, the "obey" part of the ceremony stuck. So, for that part, did the ceremony.

Some folks have no sense of humor, and others have a sense of bad humor.

All the germ of indolence wants to be let alone. It will work like yeast.

Most of us had rather be the world's champion talker than the world's champion fighter.

The days when the flies follow men home to have the screen door opened for them will soon be here.

SYNOPSIS

John Ballard rises from poverty to District Attorneyship. He loves Viola Ruskin, but fate weeds her to Hardin, an old chum, now President of a great railroad and putty to Jordan, money king. Jordan's greed causes a grave wreck. John grudgingly agrees to put the responsible officials in jail. Phil learns Viola loves John, and threatens exposure of a college brawl in which John killed a man to protect Phil. John refuses to be coerced. John and Viola confess their hopeless love to one another. The wreck trial opens in another county seat.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

One afternoon he left his office early, and, instead of going at once to Plainsville, told his driver to take him to his house, since he had need of a bag that was in his room there. And while he was in his room his telephone rang.

"Long distance call for Mr. Hardin," he heard, when he answered. "Transferred from your office, Mr. Hardin. Party is calling from Newton and wants you to pay for the call. Is that all right?"

"All right—yes. Hurry it up, that's all," he said, impatiently. "Here you are—go ahead," said the operator.

A thin, strange voice sounded in his ear.

"Mr. Hardin? Mr. Philip Hardin?"

"Yes—yes. Who is this?"

"You wouldn't know the name. Mr. Hardin. I'm one who saw you a long time ago. One night in a place where the lights went out. Do you know what I mean?"

Phil was trembling with excitement.

"Yes! Yes—go on!"

"I was there, and so was another party. This other party's on his way to see you now. He gets in on the train that gets to your city at 4:45. He's going straight to your office. You'd better arrange to see him."

"Why should I?"

"You'll be sorry if you don't. Do you know who I mean by B.?"

"Yes. You mean—"

"Careful, boss. Telephones aren't so awful private, remember. This party carries a letter it'll be a good thing for you to have—see? You can have it—at a price. He'll tell you all about that. Name of Smith, this party. Better arrange to see him."

"I'll see him—of course. How much do you want?"

"He'll tell you. And if you don't want to buy there are those who will. This party, name of Smith, is going to try to see you first. Then, if he can't, he's going to see B. A word to the wise—eh, boss? And a letter in the hand's worth two in the B—what?"

"Yes—but—"

There was a click in his ear. And when, frantically, he called back to Central he got only:

"The party you were talking with has hung up."

He could only wait—wait and telephone orders to his office that if a man named Smith came, asking for him, he was to be sent to his home immediately. But his waiting was done in a fever of impatience, and, as five o'clock approached, with an eye constantly on the clock.

At last there was a ring at the front door. He answered it himself; swung open the door and saw a man standing on the step—an unprepossessing man, in shabby clothes, with a three-day stubble of black beard on his chin.

"I want to see Mr. Hardin—Mr. Philip Hardin," said the stranger.

"Come in!" said Phil. "I'm Mr. Hardin."

"Got to have proof of that, boss," said the other.

Angrily, impatiently, Phil turned out the contents of a pocket—letters, an automobile license card, identification enough to enable him to cash a check in a strange bank. The other nodded.

"K. O. boss," he said, in a hoarse voice that spoke of much whiskey drinking. "Name of Smith. Maybe you heard by phone I was coming?"

"I did. Yes. What is it you want? Let me see this letter you brought?"

"Not so fast, boss. Not quite so fast."

Deliberately, and with painstaking care, Smith took a packet, wrapped in oil silk, from his pocket. From it he took two or three folded papers. One of these he tapped, significantly.

"There she is, boss," he said. "The original, dyed in the wool, genuine, itself and not a moving picture, letter! And there is a copy!"

Phil snatched at the crudely typed sheet.

Then the lights went out, and everyone took a crack at everyone else," he read. "I got beamed on the cork, and I beat it while the beating was good. And here's the joke. They was a lot of collegers there, and one of them thought he'd killed me! And I was willing, because Pete had it in for me and was going to frame me and have me sent up. So I let them go on thinking they'd done me in, and Harry and Buck told Pete they'd pulled me out and buried me, quiet, so there wouldn't be no trouble, that might get the joint pulled. But I got a laugh when ever I think of that colleger thinking he'd croaked me, and being scared pink every time he seen a bull looking at him."

When he had finished reading Phil stared at Smith.

"Well!" he said. "What good does this do me?"

"Well, that's to be figured out, ain't it, boss? Suppose we think a bit first about what harm it could do you. Suppose I give this letter to John Ballard?"

Phil jumped. Their last chance gone—the one hold they had on Ballard broken! He stared.

"On the other hand—suppose you take this letter—first slipping me five thousand berries—we don't want much—just five grand. What's to stop you from putting it on the fire?"

"I see—" Phil drew a long breath. "But—even so—that doesn't bring us any nearer to proving that Ballard did kill a man."

"You think of everything, don't you, boss?" said Smith, with pretended admiration. "Well, suppose I said that for another five grand—and that's only ten in all—me and a friend of mine would go on the stand and swear we seen this Ballard croak Rudy, and that we was the guys what buried him afterward?"

"Suppose Johnson appeared and proved you were lying?"

"He won't—never fear. He's dead now, if he wasn't then. No. It's safe enough, boss. It's an open and shut case for you."

Phil hesitated. Then, abruptly, he nodded.

"Five thousand now—five thousand if and when you have to testify against Ballard?"

"Fair enough. For five grand now I slip you the letter. For five grand more me and my pal go into court whenever you give the word."

"All right," Phil reached for his checkbook. Smith threw up his hands.

"No checks, boss! Gosh—what's the thinking! about? We don't either one of us want any. And knowing we've had this little talk, do we?"

"Right!" said Phil. "Wait—I can get the cash. Wait a minute. I'll send for it."

He went outside and called his butler. Half an hour later the man was back from the office of the N. Y. and C. V. R. R., with fifty crisp, new hundred dollar bills. Phil counted them out; Smith handed him the original letter, gray, folded, almost—but not quite—undecipherable.

"All right, boss," said Smith. "Now, here's my address—this is how you reach me when you want me and my pal for this other little matter."

"Very well," said Phil. A shudder of disgust shook him as he looked at Smith. To think that he, Philip Hardin, had sunk to trafficking with so low and depraved a creature as this! However—he had no choice. Self-preservation, he reminded himself, was, after all, nature's first law. "Be off, now. I'm late in starting, as it is."

"I ain't any more anxious to be seen with you than what you are to have any truck with me," said Smith. "A pretty poor lot we are, the two of us, if you ask me."

And he turned, with a contemptuous look at Phil, and left the room and the house.

Phil had received him in a small room, downstairs, used for just such casual interviews with those who called at the house on business. A gas log was in the fireplace of this room, and Phil stooped, now, and lit the gas. Then he rose, and turned to take the letter he had laid on a table, meaning to burn it without delay. What he saw made him give back a step.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Final arrangements for the opening of the Bristol Twilight Baseball League were made at a meeting held at the office of the president, David Landreth.

The schedule as presented by the secretary, Francis G. Ellis, was adopted.

The first half season will open on Monday, May 9th, and close June 27th.

A. O. M. will meet Harriman Men's Club in the opening game Monday, May 9th, at the high school field. The same evening Third Ward will cross bats with K. of C., at St. Ann's field.

Tuesday, May 10th, St. Ann's will play Leedom's at the latter field and Keystone Airplanes will encounter with the Field Club on St. Ann's diamond. Schedules will be printed and distributed in time for the opening games.

One of the perplexing problems which has confronted the twilight league has been the umpire question. This season the league has decided to compensate them for their services. Anyone who wishes to serve in this capacity should file their application with the president, David Landreth.

"Burley's" Ranch Given For Benefit of Firemen

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 23.—A large number was present to witness the presentation of "Burley's Ranch" at the Casino here last evening. The three-act drama, which was staged by the William Penn Fire Company, of Hulmeville, drew many from towns in this section.

The splendid work of Thomas Vearling, impersonating So Long, a Chinese servant, was especially commendable; and the other 13 members of the cast were commended for their excellent acting.

Music was furnished between the acts by an orchestra consisting of: Miss Harriet Cox and Messrs. Joseph Hertz, Paul Vansant, Harry Horn, C. Sharding, William Blessing, John McCarthy, and Charles Foster.

The time of the play was 1886, and the costumes were in keeping with that era. Humor and pathos as well as exciting moments marked the performance, making an interesting two-hour performance.

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

THE MERCHANTS HERE—

Are known to all of us and if purchases made here are not satisfactory they can readily be exchanged and the MERCHANTS WILL MAKE IT RIGHT.

A CIVIC DUTY—

It is a civic duty owed to the community to buy in our home town. Local merchants support Bristol and its activities and in turn they deserve to be supported.

VARIETY OF STOCKS—

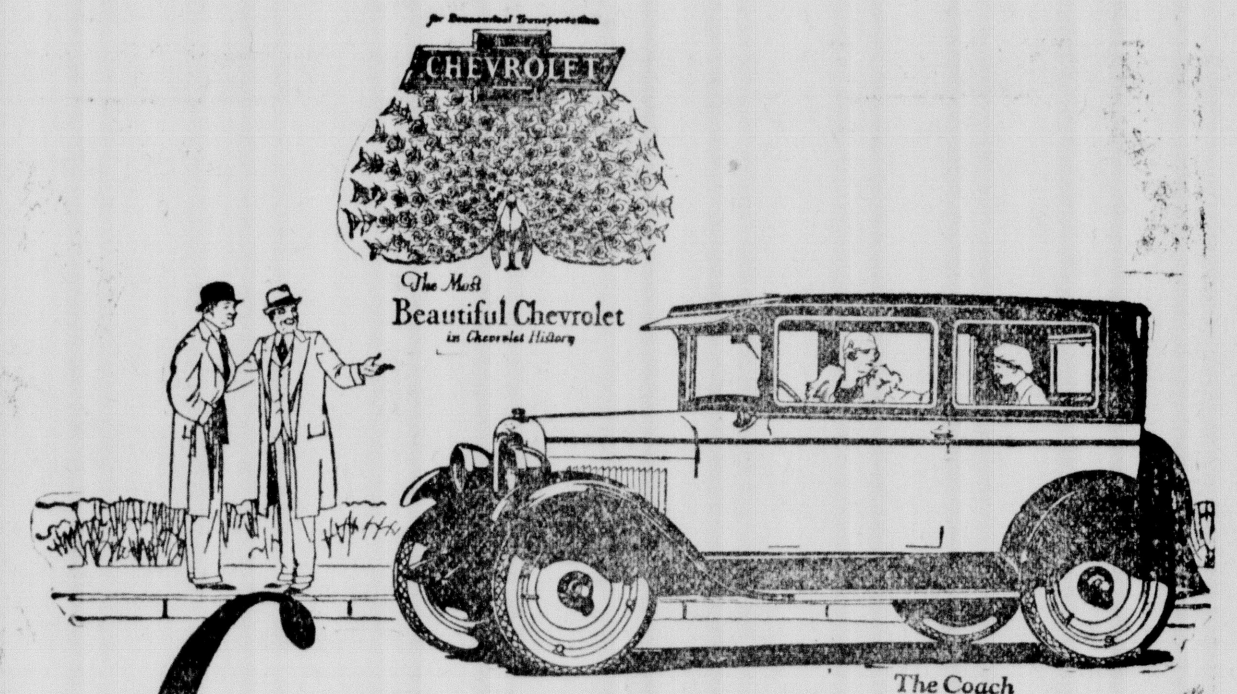

Often times it is the complaint of the shopper who goes out of town to buy that local stores do not carry the assortment or the grade of stock which is desirable. Any wide-awake merchant will stock his shelves with that class of merchandise that is demanded. That is only good business.

PRICES ARE LOWER—

This is another excuse which is often given by those who go out of Bristol to shop. It is reasonable to suppose that merchants here are not making any larger profits than those engaged in business in the cities. Overhead expenses in Bristol are sure to be lower than those in the high rent districts of the large cities.
